A NEW DISCOVERY!

Spiritualism Explained.

The question of questions, with the learned and unlearned, the materialist, scientist, religionists, and in fact everybody, is "What is Modern Spiritualism?" Is it a verity or is it all a humbug? Can it be explained from a physiological standpoint and does it come under the head of Physics, or does it come from supernatural causes and without laws or order. That the phenomena exists, is beyond dispute, whether it will ever be explained remains to be seen. That some spirits can be seen, handled and made use of to a good advantage as well as explained is also a fact to which all druggists and chemists can testify. They need not be named, because their name is legion. We refer principally to those medicines through which spirits figure largely as restorative agencies. Saur's Drug and Medicine Depot harbors a large number of healing spirits which can be purchased for a very small sum of money and if used according to directions will be the means of relieving pain and restoring the health of the afflicted. This same drug store has many other things in which it seeks to make itself useful and to benefit mankind. The book department furnishes the provisions upon which hundreds of brains are fed and are thus kept alive and active. The large stock of elegant patterns of wall and window paper is another medicine by which many homes is made warm and comfortable. Then, too, comes the many different colored paints which are not only a great preservative agency, but add to the beautiful as well, tons of which is sold annually and which gives employment to thousands of people. This is a branch of business in which this house also figures largely. Saur's Drug and Book store seems to be the depot or store house in which everything is kept which can be found in any drug and book house, at prices which everybody will acknowledge to be very low.

DEAD!

Jas. A. Garfield

President of the U. S.

At 10:35 Monday Evening!

"The Silver Cord is Loosed and the Golden Bowl is Broken at the Fountain."

The Second Martyr President finds Rest in the Grave!

The Saddest Death, Save One, in all the Records of Time.

And Now, What of the Future of Our Country.

LONG BRANCH, September 19.—The president is dead. 10:40 p. m.—The President died at 10:35 p. m. From what can be ascertained his death was from sheer exhaustion. Mr. Warren Young, assistant to private Secretary Brown, brought the news from the cottage at sixteen minutes before eleven. The first indication that anything serious had occurred was the appearance of a messenger at the Elberton hotel, who obtained a carriage and drove rapidly off. It was supposed that he had gone to summon the members of the cabinet, who left here about half-past 9 to-night.

Colonels Swain and Rockwell remained with the President about 15 minutes after 10. The President awakened and remarked to Col. Swain that he was suffering great pain and placed his hand over his heart. Dr. Bliss was summoned and when he entered the room he found the President substantially without pulse and the action of the heart was almost indistinguishable. He said at once the President was dying and directed Mrs. Garfield be called; also the doctors.

THE PRESIDENT REMAINED IN A DYING CONDITION until 10:35, when he was pronounced dead. He died of some trouble of the heart, supposed to be neuralgia, but that, of course, is uncertain. He notified Gen. Arthur, and sent a dispatch to Messrs. Blaine and Lincoln, who are en route from Boston to New York.

A Telegram extra says: By the president's bedside, holding his poor emaciated hand in her own, and watching with anguished and faithful devotion the sands of life, sat his faithful, devoted wife during the closing hours of the President's career. Around him were other weeping friends and physicians lamenting their powerlessness in the presence of the dark angel of death. Toward the last the mind of the sufferer wandered. He was once more back in Mentor amid those scenes where the happiest hour of his life were spent. He sat in the dear old homestead again with the loved ones around him. His aged mother, so proud of her big boy, his faithful wife and beloved children. It was a blissful dream that robbed death of its terrors and rendered the dying man for the moment unconscious of the cruel rending of his once vigorous frame that was constantly going on. The roar of the restless ocean mingled with the sobs of loved ones as the lamp of life flickered and went out forever. Nearly every one around the President clung to hope to the last, and refused to credit the approach of death until the shadowy door opened and the destroyer's presence could be no longer unfelt. Flags hung at half-mast from every house on Ocean avenue and the gayety of this favorite watering place is followed by the deepest gloom. The struggle is over, and death is victor.

SINKING RAPIDLY changed all this. Fryson & Brown, the livermen at the West End, had all their men within call, and the first coach reached Elberton within the lapse of eight minutes from the receipt of the first dispatch at the West End, two miles away, over a bad road and on a dark night. Coach followed coach by the score, back and forth from that hour until the daylight began to be seen. At the first alarm sleepy porters and half-awakened operators came down the stairway, half dressed and rubbing their eyes, while on the outer porch shoes were hastily buttoned and coaches started, one after another overlaid with whoever could scramble in. The ocean drive for the two miles was for six constant hours a RUNNING PARADE of over-driven horses and excited men accompanied by glittering carriage lights. Greatly as the apprehended facts had been discounted over several weeks, the announcement caused a severe shock and there were tremulous voices and moist eyes even among the busiest and hardest worked, and among those who, by the fact had lost no time to stop to think or feel.

Mrs. Garfield and Miss Mollie Garfield were to such an extent the objects of sympathy that their loss seemed to form the running comment and conversation, almost of more importance than that of the Nation. This feeling was intensified at the Elberton and among the surrounding cottages from incidents of the afternoon which probably would never have been alluded to, or thought of again, had it not been for the sad results of the night.

ARTHUR NOTIFIED. LONG BRANCH, Sept. 20, 12:25 A. M.—Attorney-General MacVeigh has just sent the following to Vice-President Arthur: "It becomes our painful duty to inform you of the death of President Garfield, and advise you to take the oath of office as President of the United States without delay. If it occurs with your judgment, we will be very glad if you will come here on the earliest train tomorrow morning."

[Signed] WM. WINDOM, Sec'y of the Treasury. W. H. HUNT, Sec'y of the Navy. THOS. L. JAMES, Postmaster General. GEN. WAYNE MACVEIGH, Attorney General. S. J. KIRKWOOD, Sec'y of the Interior.

OATH OF OFFICE. NEW YORK, Sept. 20.—General Arthur was sworn in at a quarter past two this morning at his house. Two judges of the New York Supreme Court had been sent for by J. R. Brady and Chas. Donahue, Judge Brady arriving with Messrs. Rollins and Root at ten minutes before two, but the ceremony was out of court, and deferred until Judge Donahue's arrival at a little after two o'clock, with Ex-Commissioner French.

Judge Brady stood on the one of the table facing Gen. Arthur. Grouped around the two men were Judge Donahue, Elihu Root, Commissioner French and Daniel G. Rollins, and Gen. Arthur's son. Judge Brady slowly advanced a step and raised his right hand. Gen. Arthur did likewise. A moment of impressive silence followed. Gen. Arthur's features were almost fixed. Then Judge Brady

ADMINISTERED THE OATH, Gen. Arthur speaking in a clear ringing voice:

"I do solemnly swear that I will faithfully execute the office of President of the United States, and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect and defend the constitution of the United States."

"After this he remained standing a moment longer, his hand still raised. No one spoke, nor did the President afterwards give expression to any emotion."

SHOT BY A NEGRO.

An "Okalona Outrage" That Republicans Will Not Howl About.

MEMPHIS, Sept. 15.—Gen. W. T. Tucker was assassinated last night at Okalona, Miss. He was called to the front door of his residence and shot down by an unknown party, death resulting almost instantly. His family were in another part of the house when the act was committed. Circumstances point to Houston Paush, a negro boy eighteen years old, with whom General Tucker had trouble a few days ago, as the assassin. Paush has been arrested and is now in custody. The deceased was a prominent citizen of the state, having commanded a brigade during the late civil war. Intense excitement prevails over the fiendish crime.

Doctor Pomerene Dead.

MILLERSBURG, O., September 16.—Dr. Joel Pomerene, the oldest physician in this place, died yesterday morning, the main cause of his death being rheumatism. The Doctor was born in this country on the 7th of September 1826, and was consequently in his fifty-sixth year. He was a graduate of the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia. He practiced his profession in this country until 1861, when he went into the army as a surgeon of the Forty-second Ohio, General Garfield's regiment, and after serving in that capacity for one year, was promoted to Surgeon-General, Gen. Austerhaus' division. In 1863, on account of impaired health, acquired at the siege of Vicksburg he was honorably discharged from the service. He came home and again resumed the practice of medicine at this place. He has during his brief life served in many public capacities with honor to himself and the people he represented. In 1873 he was appointed Surveyor-General on Governor Allen's staff. In 1878 he was nominated by the Democracy of Holmes county to represent them in Congress, and in the district convention came within three votes of receiving the nomination. Judge Deddes, the present incumbent (and a dark horse) receiving the nomination. For many years he has been one of the principal instructors in the Cleveland Medical College. He was a member of several secret societies and his funeral which takes place next Sunday will be conducted by the Masonic fraternity.

Our Senatorial Candidates.

After a hard struggle yesterday the Democratic Senatorial Convention placed in nomination a strong Senatorial ticket—one that is entitled to the respect and confidence of the people. General James B. Steedman needs no recommendation. His record as a soldier is unsullied. He is a man of positive character, is an indefatigable worker, and if elected, will watch with eagle eye the interest of both this city and the district.

After a long and hotly contested struggle the second choice fell upon Dr. Andrew J. Manville, of Wood county, who carried off the honors amid a cordon of worthy competitors, and the Bee has no hesitation in saying that a more worthy and capable gentleman could not have been chosen. Where he is known his personal honor, fidelity and integrity is unquestioned. Modest, unassuming, he is a ripe scholar, and industrious and thorough worker, and will guard the interests of his constituency with a jealous care. He is a gentleman who commands the respect of all classes of people wherever he is known, and in his own county his popularity is such that many Republicans will honor him with their votes. He will add strength to the Democratic ticket, and if elected will honor the position to which he is called.—Bee.

THE ORIOLE.

Busy Preparations, Engagement of the Famous Gilmore, Marine and Other Bands, Remarkably Brilliant Spectacle Promised.

Every man, woman and child in Baltimore appears to be growing interested in the Oriole, and anxious to contribute toward making it the most memorable success ever known in the country.

That it will be, now passes without argument. The Oriole will be incomparably finer in every way than last year's celebration, and to the general public will have more interest in an hour than that had in a day. Not but what the Sesqui-Centennial was a perfect and an unparalleled success, but it was to a certain extent a local glorification of deep interest to Baltimoreans and of more or less attractiveness to strangers. On the other hand the Mardi Gras Pageant will possess remarkable attraction for all the guests as well as the citizens. Its features will be of a general character and the effects produced will be brilliant and dazzling in the extreme. There will be fully three miles of the most beautiful tableaux of majestic proportions and exquisite construction. The subject portrayed will not be disclosed till the night of the pageant, lending a mystic character to it and increasing the interest. Those who have never witnessed a Mardi Gras can form no conception of its splendor and beauty. The novelty of having it under hundreds of electric lights will greatly enhance the effect and carry the beholder to the fullest realization of the most vivid imagination of the wonders of the Arabian Nights. The musical adjuncts to the pageant promise themselves to be worth a journey to hear.

At the head of the pageant will be the famous Gilmore Band, of N. Y., in handsome uniform and numbering sixty-five of the best musicians of the Metropolis.

The celebrated Marine Band of Washington has also been engaged as have all the Baltimore bands and those of adjacent cities. In addition to taking part in the Oriole pageant, Gilmore's Band will give a grand open-air concert on Wednesday afternoon and play for the Mask Ball and Carnival in the evening. What, with the reception to the French visitors, and the great military, fire and civic parade, Monday the 10th; the Mardi Gras, Tuesday the 11th; and the Carnival and other features on Wednesday the 13th; the Baltimore Oriole will certainly eclipse any similar celebration known in the United States. The B. & O. has not only made a rate of one half fare from all stations on its main line, divisions and branches, but is making extensive preparations to afford every accommodation for all who attend.

A Beneficent Action.

The worn look and miserable feelings of those closely confined in mills, or at desks or at work tables, are caused by weak Stomach, Kidneys or Bowels, and show the necessity for some mild tonic to build them up. No one need suffer thus who will use Parker's Ginger Tonic; for without intoxicating it has such a beneficial action on the sluggish organs and so cleanses the poisonous matters from the system, that it not only checks and good health and spirits are soon brought back again.—Express. THEY DECLINE.

The Democrats Prepare to Abandon a Speaking Campaign.

While President Garfield Lies at the Point of Death.

The Republicans Decidedly Decline to Make any Such Arrangement.

[From the Bee.]

COLUMBUS, O., Sept. 19.—The following correspondence, made public to-day, explains itself.

COLUMBUS, O., September 17. Gen. K. Nash, Chairman, Republican State Executive Committee:

DEAR SIR: During the week a long list of appointments for the able and distinguished speakers of the Republican party have been announced for Ohio, beginning on the 20th inst. The Democratic Committee has been ready to open the speaking campaign, but in the condition and critical illness of the President we have thought that patriotism and sorrow in the presence of that awful calamity to our country demanded that partisanship should be silent. The tidings each day from the great sufferer grow gloomier, and indicate that death alone will end the tragedy. In view of this sad condition of affairs, we wish to suggest to you that we are willing to avoid all discussion of the President, if you will consent to the arrangement we will not announce any meeting provided you will withdraw your appointments. However, if you do not care to do this, a sense of duty compels us to say that we do not feel like opening the campaign while President Garfield lingers at the door of death.

Yours respectfully,

CLARK IRVINE, Chairman of Committee.

G. O. KEY, Secretary.

Mr. Clark Irvine, Chairman Democratic State Executive Committee:

DEAR SIR: Your favor of this day has been received. In reply I will say that this committee, before it announced the opening of its campaign for the 17th inst. and not for the 20th, as stated in your letter, determined that a fair, honest and candid presentation of the principles of the Republican party would be neither improper or unparliamentary. These principles President Garfield loved and advocated with all his great power. From his lifelong and magnificent record we know that their triumph is most earnestly wished for by him. Whether, by the will of Providence, President Garfield lives or dies, it is the sacred duty of Republicans to use all proper means to maintain these principles. President Garfield, when a soldier for the Union, never faltered because an eminent and useful commander fell upon the field of battle. If Garfield's voice should be heard he would bid his old comrades: "Do not abandon principles because I suffer." In contending for his and their principles, Republicans will follow his example and obey his command. Whether it is proper at this time to advocate the principles which the President always believed to be injurious to the country is a question for your committee to determine for itself. In conclusion, let me assure you that no one can feel greater sorrow over the critical condition of President Garfield than those who stood by him and vindicated his honor and good name from all attacks less than one year ago. Very respectfully,

GEORGE K. NASH, Chairman Republican State Executive Com.

Let the Swine Go.

[Cincinnati Commercial, Rep., April 12, 1881.]

As for the temperance fanatics, we shall always have them with us, and they will never be satisfied. The same people, if they had everything else they could name, would insist upon regulating the price of salutariness in bread.

But we shall not worry much about it. When swine get the devil in them and are rushing down into the sea, it is just as well to let them go.

Druggist's Testimony.

H. F. McCarthy, druggist, Ottawa, Ont., states that he was afflicted with chronic bronchitis for some years and was completely cured by the use of Thomas' Electric Oil. For sale by Saur.

AMERICA'S most famous caterer, Lorenzo Delmonico, of New York, died in a cottage attached to the Paxton Hotel, at Sharon Springs, New York, last week. The Delmonico's are an ancient Swiss family. Lorenzo has always been very successful in his business enterprises, and is said to have been worth at least $3,000,000. During his latter years he had smoked to excess, and the number and strength of the cigars which he daily consumed no doubt added to the complications as a result of which he died. His cigars were made to his order in Havana, were of unusual size, and as black almost as licorice. Of these he is said to have smoked nearly thirty a day. One cigar of such strength would have been considered excessive by moderate smokers.

Found at Last.

What everyone should have and never be without, is Thomas' Electric Oil. It is thorough and safe in its effects, producing the most wonderful cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, burns, bruises and wounds of every kind. For sale by Saur.

An exchange makes this suggestion for business men. If towns where a newspaper is published, every business man ought to advertise in it, even if it is only a card stating his name and kind of business he is engaged in. It helps sustain a paper, and lets the people at a distance know that the town is a business town. The paper finds its way into thousands of places where handbills cannot reach. A card in the paper is a traveling sign-board, and can be seen by every eye. Think of these things, and let your business flourish.
